RICHMOND, CALIFORNIA, FRIDAY MORNING, NOVEMBER 22, 1929.

RICHMOND BROADCASTS STORY OF GROW

Richmond talked to the world last night and sent out its mes-sage of industrial development and plans for the future. In the annual chamber of commerce meeting held last night at the Carquinez Hotel in conjunction with the official welcome and dedication of Radio Station KFWM, Richmond sent cut to thousands of radio listeners the message of the city.

The session, largest in the history of the city was attended not only by a crowded banquet ha!! of Richmond boosters but by thousands who listened at their homes as the new radio. by thousands who listened at their homes as the new radio voice of the city carried forth its message of progress and develop-

Brooks Toastmaster

J. F. Brooks, pioneer resident of the city acted as official toastmaster after being introduced by P. M. Sanford president of the chamber of commerce. Sanford sketched a short picture of Richmond development for the last few years, paying tribute to Con-gressman Charles Curry for his aid in developing the Richmond waterfront, and in assisting this city in numerous other ways. Sanford pointed out that the harbor of Richmond was ready for industry after three years of intensive work and preparation and that an ear of development unparalleled in this city could be expected within the next year or

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 21 .-P-After 12 hours of questionng. police said here tonight tha Laurence Tulloch, radio expert, had admitted he killed Mrs. Ger-trude Hawkins Levine blonde divorcee and claimed his revolver was discharged accidentally. Mrs. Lavine's body was found in the bungalow of an art colony early today with a bullet through her head and the re-volver lying in such a position as to indicate suicide. "Before God. I had no inten-tion of killing her," Tulloch said, according to autoptties.

according to authorities

Tulloch's version of the affair as related by police officials who claimed they took the admission was as follows:

"We were sitting in the living from of my home and started alking about guns. I went to the drawer where by revolver was kept and took it out. She was curious about how the revolver worked and I start-

Though beams and rafters crumble to the dust, And plaster falls, and windows break and crash, Though from old age it totters-live it must.

Even the sugging doorsills hold the print Of passing teet, and creaking stair and hall Embrace old shadows, and the paneled oak Resounds again with echo's plaintive call.

The Hebraic

Goal In spite of all the sordidness and misery of the East, these are the lands where the great religions of the earth were born, and where other creeds may originate some day. A little mullah is born every minute, it should not be forgotten. Some day there may be one with the fire and the zeal and the passion of a Mohammed, and sweep the world with a new belief, enforcing it upon others at the point of the sword. However that may be, there is no doubt that we owe our religious sentiments largely to the East and no other element has penetrated deeper into the texture of human relations than this. Some Teutons bewail the fact that the modern Western world did not preserve the old Germanic gods, Thor, the god of war, and Wotan and Freya. Some even, like Marshal Ludendorff, have broken with Christianity, and have gone back to the gods of Valhalla, disdaining to worship any longer at the shrine of Oriental fantasy. If gods are invented, the Easterners made a better job of it than the Saxon and Gallic ancestors of the present European nations. At best Thor and Wotan were but crude deities, warlike, quarrelsome and drunkards, like the humans. The Hebrews presented us with a god of justice, and with the ideal of justice in man's inter-relationships. And it is to that ancient Hebraic goal that mankind is moving. For when the last imperial master shall have gaspod out his breath, and when mankind shall have smashed and thrown away its idols of blood and guile, then shall live Israel's vision of goodness and love and justice. Empire

Abyssinian tribes on the Kenya border are on the warpath. Raiding parties cross the frontier into British territory, rustle cattle, set native villages on fire and massacre the inhabitants. Blood feuds are started that way and murder and countermurder would have no end if the British didn't go in there to restore order. Of course, that's no easy matter. The tribes are inflamed to the boiling point. Their medicine men and witch doctors work them up into a frenzy of fanaticism and blood lust. The first stranger encountered is bound to be slaughtered without much ado. One would expect that only a considerable armed force would be capable of restoring some semblance of order and compel the-excited hordes of warriors to return to their villages and go back to pasturing and corn raising. Instead, the British have the peculiar method of sending an officer in there with ten or a dozen men to parley with the boys. The dozen men are, of course, hopelessly inadequate to cope with the situation in a direct manner and they accompany the officer merely as an escort and for purposes of prestige. Somehow or other the that much-to-be-desired handloomed effect and are in reality more slenderising than the patterned surfaces, with the result they are unusually flattering.

They are also more versatile, companioning nicely with sheer woolens,

He doesn't parley much, you may be sure, the English not being given to excessive talk. Still he does it. Mostly by the simple fact of his appearance. The natives know that they can easily kill him and his soldiers. But they also know that another officer with more soldiers will take the place of the first. They may even overpower the second batch and it may take long months before a third expedition appears. But appear it will, and punish it will, too. The natives know, just as Napoleon remarked, that the English always lose every battle except the last one.

Only it's amazing to what extent credulity will go, and with what cynical commercialism those in charge impose upon the good faith of the pious. On the Via Dolorosa there is a spot on a wall marked by finger prints. It is explained that Christ, wearily dragging His cross up to Calvary, rested here and supported himself. The imprint is fresh every second day or so. The lips of hundreds of pilgrims who pass, efface it. I was shown a saddle said to have served on the occasion when Jesus rode in triumph into Jerusalem. again! The famous creator of "The Covered Wagon" and numerous other immortal motion pictures recently embraced talking rictures, and his first all dialogue picture "The Great Gabbo" a singing, dancing and dramatic spectace, which will be shown on the screen of the Fox-Califor-nia theater today and tomorrow has been halled throughout the wor'd as a tremendous dramatic success. It is breaking current box-office records wheever it is exhibited.

Another interesting item in con-ection with "The Great Gabbo" that in this vehicle Erich von troheim also makes his talking icture debut. Betty Compson, who holds th unique record of having appeared in more talking p'etures than any actress is the featured play-er in this sensational production. The other headliners in the cast are Donald Doug'as and Margie Kane. Mr. Douglas is a recruit from light opera, while recruit from light opera while Miss Kane leared to rereen prominence from the vauleville circuits. While the story of "The Great Gabbo" is dramatic and everflowing with "punch" situations, the addition of a chorus of 500 singing and dancing boys and girls is making "The Great Gabbo" one of the outstanding iscreen attractions of the current season.

Moths May Save You Hun-dreds of Dollars. MORTEMOTH

KILLS MOTHS The gas from Mortemoth crystals not only protects your furulture for a long time, but contact with it kills all moths, their eggs and their dangerous larvae in furniture which is al-ready infested. The proper method of using Mortemoth crystals is to tie them in small sacks, and to place these sacks down in the channel of the piece, as deeply as possible, behind the cush-ions, so that, upon expansion, the gas will spread and fill the spring units in the back and in the bottom of the piece.

When the sacks are empty, fill them again. PRICE $1.25 PER BOTTLE
